

Hsuan Tsang – Nagarjuna's Exploring of the Tale

By Nagarjuna

I. Rare – Dalai Lama on Buddhist Scriptures

I am surprised we find this rare piece. It is just a few pieces we find – and has stories is true. It just tells us stories on Chinese hair dying and other such surprising few writings. I mean also rare, truly rare to know Shomit Sirohi – someone who is a scribe who keeps writing books and exploring languages and mathematics. He is always happy but can be attacked by suffering people – he explores the world of pain and uneducation, even healthcare issues and keeps behaving happy and funny, he is like a Buddhist who will be serious and then preach in humanism, but he can just be a Buddhist of his kind – a man who listens to Zhuang Zhi almost all the time in trouble – he is rescued by the I Ching always in fact he thinks.

This connects it all up he argues – I Ching, Ti Mao, Tingmo Bread and the story of Hsuan Tsang – something like that is scriptural studies on our side – but in Prakrit he has taught us – or simple Hindi he speaks.

I now sound happy – earlier I meant intellectuals and his poor are miserable companions, to make it sound like Buddha.

II. Nagarjuna

If you know the world, it is difficult to know. One can just call it knowing us, Buddhists, we are always looking for Nirvana – and it means meticulous on each cycle of moments in life, but also in form of life – that is Buddhist – that water and its freshness not being adequate can lead to depression itself. I mean follow Hsuan Tsang – he is travelling.

- I. He is travelling, a Chinese joke.
- II. In speed walking.
- III. Such wind.
